Tashkent City Map (by Ilya Birman)

Ancient, Soviet, Modern Tashkent

Tashkent, the capital of Uzbekistan, is a vibrant metropolis situated at the crossroads of ancient Silk Road trade routes. With a population of over 3 million, the city is a unique multinational center that truly embodies cultural diversity.

According to the Uzbekistan State Statistics Committee (Goskomstat) data from January 1st, 2024, the city's demographic composition is remarkably diverse:

- Uzbeks: 65.5%
- Russians: 15.3%
- Tajiks: 8.7%
- Kazakhs: 4.2%
- Other nationalities: 6.3%

The historical center of the city preserves centuries of rich history. At Amir Temur Square, where a monument to General Kaufman once stood, now rises a statue of the great Central Asian ruler. The architectural landscape is a fascinating blend of cultures, featuring:

- Ancient madrasahs
- Historic mosques
- Orthodox and Catholic churches
- Evangelical Lutheran Church
- Synagogues

This religious and cultural diversity highlights the city's remarkable tolerance and openness. The devastating earthquake of 1966 became a pivotal moment in Tashkent's development. Parts of the city were almost completely rebuilt, with modern quarters like Chilanazar emerging, featuring wide avenues and green boulevards.

The educational potential of Tashkent is truly impressive. According to official statistics:

- Over 50 higher education institutions
- Approximately 120,000 university students annually
- More than 15 international branch campuses
- 8 national research universities

Modern Tashkent is a dynamically developing metropolis where ancient traditions harmoniously blend with innovative technologies. The new financial center, international hotels, wide boulevards, and modern shopping centers coexist with historical monuments and traditional bazaars.

Safety and comfort are hallmarks of the city. The presence of law enforcement in public spaces creates a calm atmosphere for residents and tourists alike.

Key highlights of Tashkent:

- A multicultural hub with over 130 ethnic groups
- Strategic location in Central Asia
- Rich historical heritage
- Rapidly developing economic center
- Significant educational and cultural potential

The city continues to develop, maintaining its unique identity as a crossroads of civilizations, where past and present exist in harmonious unity.

From the Airport

Tashkent Islam Karimov International Airport (TAS) offers direct flights to various destinations, including major airports like New York, London, Istanbul, Moscow, Astana, Almaty, Bishkek, Munich, Dubai, Delhi, Seoul, Baku, Tel Aviv, Frankfurt, Beijing, Shanghai, to name but a few, making it an easy entrance point to Uzbekistan. TAS is located about 8 km south of the city center (approximately 20 minutes by car without traffic). The new metro circle line currently under construction will soon connect the airport to the city.

At the moment, the most convenient way is to take a taxi from the airport. You can either use a ride-hailing app like Yandex.Taxi or Uber, or take the official Taxi Airport Tashkent taxi at the airport. The journey to the New Uzbekistan University typically takes around 15-30 minutes, depending on traffic. Taxi Airport Tashkent desk stands at the exit of the arrivals terminal. You come to the desk and provide your address. Manager calculates the cost and tells the amount to pay in cash in UZS or with a bank card. You get the receipt indicating the address and the amount paid, and take the first taxi in line. Approximate cost of the ride will be 2 -7 USD depending on your destination in the city and type of car.

Metro, Public Transit and Transit Card

The heartbeat of Tashkent is its public transport system, particularly the metro. To navigate the city with ease, the metro is your best friend with trains arriving every five minutes. The metro stations are about a 20-minute walk apart. The metro operates from 5 AM until midnight, giving you plenty of time to explore.

The network boasts four lines, but for most travelers, the first three will be your go-to routes: Chilonzor (the red line), O'zbekiston (the blue line), and Yunsobod (the green line). There's a new outer circle line under construction that will connect Tashkent's suburbs and even the airport!

Buses complement the transport system. They're perfect for those shorter trips or for getting you from the metro to your final destination, especially since distances in Tashkent can be quite long.

Whether you're hopping on the metro or catching a bus, a single ticket costs only 1,700 som with a card or 2,000 sum with a single ride ticket. The metro itself is a tourist attraction! Each station is uniquely designed, showcasing stunning architecture and art that reflect Uzbekistan's rich culture. See the short Tourist Guide to Tashkent Metro

Taxis are very affordable, widely used, especially convenient if you use Yandex or Uklon apps. In most cases you get the car in 5 minutes time to bring you anywhere in the city.

When planning your stay, it's always a good idea to check recent reviews and book in advance to secure the best rates. Websites like Hostelworld, Booking.com, or Airbnb can provide additional options and up-to-date information on prices and availability.

Medical Services and Pharmacies

Pharmacies in Uzbek are called “Dorixona” and in Russian “Apteka”. There are pharmacies literally on every corner.

There are many modern state owned and private hospitals and clinics in Tashkent. Check your health insurance to ensure that it covers medical services in Uzbekistan, as this can significantly affect your out-of-pocket expenses. Many private hospitals and clinics offer high-quality care and may have English-speaking staff, making them a convenient choice for expatriates and travelers.

These day trips provide a fantastic opportunity to experience the diverse culture, history, and natural beauty of Uzbekistan while being based in Tashkent.

Museums and historical sites

Notably many museums in Tashkent have their mobile apps or AR, to enhance immersive experiences and provide more information to the visitors.

• Center of Islamic Civilization: The Centre for Islamic Civilisation, a striking neo-Timurid building with a large turquoise dome, is under construction in Tashkent's Old City. The iwans are beautifully decorated, reflecting Uzbekistan's rich artistic heritage. Once completed, the centre will house a library, exhibition halls featuring ancient manuscripts and Islamic art, and conference spaces.

A short walk north leads to the Hazrati Imom Complex, home to Tashkent's key historical sites. The complex includes the Hazrati Imom Mosque, Muiy Muborak Madrasah—where the oldest known Qur'an is kept—Baroq Khan Madrasah, and Tillya Sheikh Mosque.

The Hazrati Imom Mosque, built in 2007 in a 16th-century style, features luxurious materials sourced from India and Turkey. Muiy Muborak Madrasah, originally a Sufi khanqah from the 16th century, now serves as a Qur'an library-museum housing the revered ancient Quran written on deerskin.

Baroq Khan Madrasah, dating back to the 16th century, was designed for local students and features lecture halls instead of rooms. Nearby, Tillya Sheikh Mosque, constructed in 1890 by a wealthy merchant, was once the largest mosque in Tashkent. Finally, the Tomb of Abu Bakr Kaffal, a 10th-century polymath, is located in the complex's northwestern corner. Uzbekistan will become a center that widely promotes the idea of “Third Renaissance – New Uzbekistan” and studies the achievements of the period of new revival on a scientific basis.

Currency

Uzbekistan's currency is the Uzbek som (UZS). The exchange rate of the Uzbek som against major currencies: 1 US dollar (USD) is about 13,000 UZS and 1 euro (EUR) is about 13,400 UZS (January 2025).

Exchanging currency in Uzbekistan to local soms is relatively straightforward. Foreign currencies, particularly USD and EUR, can be exchanged at banks, exchange offices, and even some hotels. However, it is important to be cautious and ensure using licensed exchange services to avoid scams or unfavorable rates.

Banks typically offer competitive rates for currency exchange. It is advisable to compare rates before exchanging large sums of money. ATMs are also available in major cities and tourist areas, allowing visitors to withdraw cash in Uzbek soms directly. Check with your bank regarding international withdrawal fees and notify them of your travel plans to avoid any issues with card usage abroad. International major cards are widely accepted in Tashkent, while small and street sellers may accept only cash payments in local soms.

Precautions

Do not drink tap water, either boil it or get bottled water.

In Tashkent, as in many urban areas, pedestrians face various hazards that can impact their safety and comfort. Definitely do not read your smartphone while walking. Here are some key considerations regarding pedestrian hazards in the city:

1. Uneven Pavements: Many sidewalks may have uneven surfaces due to design. These irregularities can pose tripping hazards, especially for those with mobility issues or when navigating the area at night.
2. Surprise Steps: In most parts of Tashkent, including restaurants, banks, public offices,, there are sudden changes in elevation, such as unexpected steps or curbs. These can catch pedestrians off guard, particularly if they are distracted or not paying close attention to their surroundings.
3. Aryks, or Irrigation and Drainage Systems: Be aware that most streets and roads are bordered with aryks in Tashkent. Pedestrians should be cautious when walking near the edge of pavement or road.
4. Construction Zones: Sudden ongoing construction projects can create issues for pedestrians. It's important to watch for detours, barriers, and equipment that may obstruct pathways. Usually there is no sign or fence so you need to pay attention.
5. Vehicle Traffic: The interaction between pedestrians and vehicles can be dangerous. Use designated crosswalks and be vigilant for turning vehicles. Some intersections may lack clear signage or signals, increasing the risk of accidents.
6. Bicycles and Scooters: With the rise of shared bicycles and electric scooters, pedestrians should also be aware of these vehicles on sidewalks and shared paths. Riders may not always yield to pedestrians, so maintaining awareness is crucial.
7. Street Vendors and Obstacles: Street vendors and outdoor cafes can sometimes encroach on pedestrian pathways, narrowing the space available for walking. Be mindful of your surroundings and navigate around these obstacles carefully.
8. Poor Lighting: In certain areas of Tashkent, inadequate lighting can make it difficult to see hazards at night. Walking in well-lit areas is advisable, and using a flashlight or phone light can enhance visibility when needed.
9. Weather Conditions: Rain and snow can exacerbate existing hazards, making pavements slippery and increasing the risk of falls. In winter, ice can form on sidewalks, creating additional dangers.

To ensure safety while walking in Tashkent, it's essential to remain alert and cautious. Wearing appropriate footwear, being aware of your surroundings, and following local traffic rules can help mitigate these hazards.

Finally, drinking alcohol is not considered a social norm in Uzbekistan. The major religion is Islam, which traditionally discourages the consumption of alcohol. While some social gatherings may involve drinking, it is often limited and not a central aspect of socializing. Instead, hospitality is expressed through the sharing of non-alcoholic beverages and traditional foods.
